German Raider and Britisher Clash Off S. A.

Germans Claim Sinking of 4 Merchantmen by a Submarine

BERLIN—(AP)—The high command reported Friday that a German auxiliary vessel severely damaged a British ship of the same class in a battle in the South Atlantic, and credited a Nazi submarine with sinking four British merchantmen totaling 13,000 tons.

The date of the engagement was not specified.

In London, the Admiralty reported a fierce long-range encounter between a German "Q-boat"—a disguised raider—and the British armed merchant cruiser Carnarvon Castle in which the British ship suffered "slight damage" and the German ship was said to have fled.

The battle took place somewhere in the South Atlantic.

The admiralty acknowledged "some casualties" aboard the Carnarvon Castle, a vessel of 20,122 tons.

(Information reaching informed quarters in Buenos Aires on the South Atlantic battle indicated the engagement occurred within or near the American neutrality zone.)

Britisher Seeks Repairs

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay—(AP)—The British merchant cruiser Carnarvon Castle, damaged Thursday in a battle with a German raider, was expected to reach this harbor next Monday—apparently seeking repairs.

It was learned authoritatively that the Uruguayan government had granted permission to enter.

Informed sources placed the scene of the battle 1,000 miles northeast of Montevideo, within the American neutrality belt.

Defense Wage Hike Assailed

May Cost Nation Additional 250 Million Dollars

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Representatives Costello (Dem., Calif.) told the House Thursday that if the new scale paid by Vultee Aircraft Company in California should become universal in the aircraft industry the additional cost to the government for warplanes would be $250,000,000.

"The government must decide now whether the taxpayer is going to be called upon to pay the price $250,000,000 but receive not one additional plane," Costello declared. "These increases are the first step in a period of inflation which threatens to make the silk shirt days of the World War period look like shreds of cotton."

Costello asserted "the ink was not dry on the Vultee agreement" before demands for higher wages were made upon other companies. He said the industry was being threatened with strikes "which promise to bring the entire aviation defense program to a standstill."

Medical Group Will Seek to Restrain Crows

Injunction Against Hope Chiropractors to Be Asked Monday

The controversy between Dr. Floyd C. Crow, Hope chiropractor, and the Arkansas Basic Science Board, which has involved state boards and the governor's office since early autumn, will reach the local courts Monday, December 9.

Dr. Crow and his wife, Dr. Mary Virginia Crow, received a registered letter Friday morning from Peter A. Deisch, Little Rock, attorney for the Arkansas Medical Society, saying that the medical society would go before Chancellor A. P. Steel in Sixth district chancery court here Monday and seek an injunction to prohibit the Crows from practicing chiropractic.

Earlier this fall Dr. Floyd C. Crow's removal as secretary of the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners was requested by the Arkansas Science Board, but Governor Bailey refused to remove him, on the ground that his license complied with state law.

Medical Group's Charges

According to Mr. Deisch's registered notice delivered to the Crows, the injunction to be sought here Monday to restrain them from practice will charge:

"That the defendants Floyd C. Crow and Mary Virginia Crow, each of them are engaged in the practice of chiropractic in this state, maintaining an office for said practice of chiropractic in this state, maintaining an office for said practice in the city of Hope in Hempstead county, where they and each of them hold themselves out as being legally licensed and privileged to practice said calling or profession, and they do treat patients for hire, and carry on and perform the ordinary tasks and duties, and perform the ordinary treatments incident to such practice.

"That the basic science law, enacted in 1929, imposed an additional requirement to those theretofore imposed, on those who desired to be licensed to practice the healing art in this state, and that said additional requirement consisted of requiring a certificate of competency in the basic sciences before applying to either of the examining boards which issue licenses to practice the healing art; that the practice of chiropractic constitutes the practice of the healing art, and it is required by said basic science act that one desiring to apply for a chiropractic license (or any other license to practice the healing art) shall first secure a certificate of competency in the basic sciences from the Basic Science Board of Examiners."

Crows' Reply

Speaking for his wife and himself Friday, Dr. F. C. Crow made this statement regarding the registered notice from Attorney Deisch:

"We obtained our Arkansas chiropractic licenses in good faith by reciprocity with the State of Kansas. Our authority was a ruling by Attorney General F. L. Bailey, and Carl Bailey that passage of the basic science law in 1929 did not repeal the reciprocity clause of the original chiropractic act which was adopted in 1915."

Hope Boy to Lead Hendrix

Robert Jewell Chosen 1941 Football Captain

CONWAY.—The Hendrix College football squad elected Robert Jewell, center, captain of the 1941 team Thursday night. George Jones of Conway, blocking halfback, was chosen alternate captain. The election was held at a banquet given the squad by Hendrix students at Club Taber.

Jewell, a junior, was one of the squad's most dependable linemen the past season. He will succeed Ray Harris of Rogers, all-state tackle. Jones is a sophomore. He is a brother of Charles and Frank Jones, former Hendrix stars.

Hendrix gave letters to 16 players.

Hope Boys on Teachers Squad

Ellen, Stone, Baker Expected to Play Saturday

CONWAY.—When Arkansas' best 1940 appearance of the All-State freshman end, Bobby Ellen will appear in the starting line-up.

Indications are that Freeman Stone, giant guard for the Bears and Charles Ray Baker, elusive half back, will also see action before the 1940 Champions of the State of Arkansas are finished with the Far Western Conference Champions, the Fresno Bulldogs.

Ellen, playing his first year of college football for the Bears this year, was switched to end by Coach Warren B. Woodson at the start of the season for his already cinched back field position, and dug in as he ousted several veteran wingmen from a position on the starting line-up. Then he began to play in earnest, developing faster than any other ball player in the state and winning unanimous acclaim on the current All-Arkansas eleven.

Not only has he been accredited with the majority of Bear tackles made behind the opposing lines of scrimmage, but he has scored six touchdowns on his famed end around and pass completions, to lead this year's champions in scoring.

Stone, playing behind two senior linemen, has never been able to break ties in an increasing stream.

Not Enough Guns or Tanks, But Both Are on Way

By WILLIS THORNTON

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—In the six months since May 16 when President Roosevelt announced that full steam was being turned into the preparedness program, the U. S. Army has laid a broad, firm foundation for the great army that is in the making.

Here are some of the accomplishments:

From about 240,000 men, the army on active service has been increased to about 550,000 men.

From scattered tank battalions and regiments, two full armored divisions have been fashioned, and are today "ready for battle," according to their officers.

Several infantry divisions have been completely equipped with the new Garand semi-automatic rifle. About 38,000 such rifles were available in May—now the number is crowding 100,000.

Miles of modern barracks in a score of camps have been completed or are nearing completion. Scores of thousands of acres of land have been bought and added to military posts for firing ranges or maneuver fields.

At least one division (the Second, at Ft. Sam Houston) has been completely motorized.

Officers' schools at Ft. Sill for the artillery and Ft. Benning for the infantry have been expanded to handle 5,000 and 8,000 officers a year in "refresher" and "brush-up" courses, and several thousand such officers are now going through 10-week courses in the schools.

Of 15,000,000 men registered under the selective service act Oct. 16, about 25,000 have been inducted into service. Not quite 100,000 of 250,000 National Guardsmen have been called into active service.

Work at almost every camp centers around training men to be instructors of those who are to follow. Great schools for radio operators, mechanics, cooks and other specialists have been established on a scale equaled only by the largest universities.

Morale Good

A tour of a dozen of the large army camps and posts recently conducted for newsmen by the War Department leads to this conclusion:

The groundwork has been laid for an impressive army. What can be seen today is not an army, but the foundation for an army—and it is a foundation both broad and deep.

The great lack is in material, chiefly in guns. The 105 mm. heavy field gun, planned to be the standard divisional artillery weapon to replace the World War 75 and its adaptations, has not yet appeared in any quantity. Neither have heavy tanks, though light and medium tanks of new design are now coming from the factories in an increasing stream.

Britain to Give U. S. 'the Facts'

To Disclose Balance Sheets, and Supply Costs

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Sir Frederick Phillips, undersecretary of the British treasury, said Friday after a conference with secretary Morgenthau that he is giving the United States a "balance sheet on the state of our resources, and the cost of supplies in the United States."

The British representative conferred with the Treasury department chief for more than an hour.

Sir Frederick said, however, that he talked only facts with Morgenthau. "We didn't discuss any questions of policy."

Before entering the treasury, Sir Frederick told newsmen who asked about loans that he is "not up to that stage now."

Hammons, May, Martindale Receive Awards

Jimmy Simms, in a meeting of the football squad here Thursday afternoon, was selected to captain the Hope High School Bobcats during the 1941 season. Foy Hammons, Jr., was chosen as sub-captain.

Both boys have been outstanding on the gridiron this year and have shown excellent students in the classroom.

Each year Stewart's Jewelry Store awards a trophy to the most valuable player, the award this year going to Mack May, guard. May was chosen by his team mates.

Another award, given by Miss Beryl Henry, to the best all-around player, went to Judd Martindale, halfback, who has been a mainstay all season. Martindale was selected by Miss Henry, and the coaches and his schoolmates standing and action in class rooms were taken into consideration as well as action on the field.

Badoglio Out as Greeks Take 2 More Bases

Greeks Capture Porto Edda and Argiostro, in Albania

ROME—(AP)—The resignation of Marshal Pietro Badoglio as chief of the Italian general staff was announced officially Friday.

He was replaced by General Ugo Cavallio, veteran of three Italian wars, until recently commander of the Italian forces in East Africa.

Badoglio, Italy's most famed soldier, sometimes called the "Italian Hindenburg" had been chief of the general staff for 15 years.

As such, he had supreme command of all three branches of the nation's fighting forces.

The communique announcing his resignation gave no reason, saying only it was "on own request."

Greeks Take 2 Bases

BITOLJ, Yugoslavia—(AP)—Dispatches reaching the Yugoslav border said Greek troops occupied Argiostro, Albania, about noon Friday after bloody fighting, and took more than 1,000 prisoners.

A number of heavy cannon, machine-guns and other war material were reported captured by the Greeks.

Meanwhile, it was officially announced at Athens that Greek troops had occupied Porto Edda, one of the Italian army's main bases in southern Albania.

WE, THE WOMEN
Simple Rule Eliminates Arguments
By RUTH MILLETT
A happy, gracious wife of fifty whose husband even insists that she go on business trips with him broke down the other day and told me she swivel-necked, and even the sound-thought her marriage had been happy because she had always stuck to one rule.
That rule is this: "When my husband and I disagree about some purchase plan, or action, I will never insist on having my own way and fight for it unless I think that the matter is so important I will be miserable, or that I feel the family will really be the loser if I give in."
Only 5 Fights in 25 Years
She confessed then that by judging the importance of questions in that light she had only battled for her opinion five times in 25 years of marriage. And because she so rarely fought it out, her husband never resented her winning those five big decisions, because he knew she was not fighting just to get her own way. I asked her how she proceeded on minor questions, on which she was willing to give in. Here is what she said:
"I give my reasons for feeling as I do. Often my husband thinks they are good ones, and we agree on a decision.
"If he still is determined he is right, I say, 'Maybe you are. Let's try it your way.'
"Sometimes it works out that he was right, and I say it was a good thing we did as he wanted.
"Never Once an 'I Told You So'.
"If it doesn't, I never say, 'I told you so,' and when he says, 'I should have listened to you about that,' as he often does, I make it clear that it could have turned out all right his way.
"I am sure that my husband has never felt bossed, or hen-pecked because he knows that he can get his way if he wants it, and that if his way turns out to be a mistake, he will not hear about it for the rest of his life."
It's a simple rule, isn't it? And not too hard to follow, if it can keep a marriage running smoothly and eliminate most of the quarrels, recriminations and resentments that spoil so many marriages.

Mexico Enters a New Phase
The complete calm and lack of disturbance with which Manuel Avila Camacho was inaugurated as Mexico's new president may prove to be a happy augury for his six-year term. The United States, whose chief interest lies in a Mexico steadily progressing under stable institutions, hopes it may be so.
The rude and unpleasant demonstration staged for Secretary Wallace on his arrival to attend the inauguration need not be taken too seriously. The sheer, fruitless bad taste of the affair pretty well identifies it with one of those political minorities whose sole influence lies in such demonstrations. There is no reason to doubt that Wallace's warm reception later by the Chamber of Deputies is much more representative of a growing cordiality toward the United States, which the Avila Camacho regime is pledged to foster.
The United States has been most patient and sympathetic toward Mexico in the past few years. That is partly due to a genuinely increasing good-will and understanding, and partly due, frankly, to the knowledge that Mexican good-will is more important to the United States today than it has been for a long time.
Our two countries need each other. Each will benefit by cultivating the other's good-will in the only effective way—by deserving it.
Avila Camacho takes the reins of Mexico at a difficult time. He succeeds a man, Lazaro Cardenas, who is generally conceded to have been a great president. Even those who disagree with his policies do not minimize his sheer stature. To be successor to such a man is always difficult.
Avila Camacho's own following is by no means united. He must restore the confidence of business, both foreign and domestic, while guarding the gains made by labor under Cardenas; again, not an easy task. He must revive an economy badly shattered by domestic convulsions and the shutting off of foreign trade. He must defend his country against foreign influences which have not hesitated to intrigue with his political opponents. He must settle the long-festering "oil controversy."
In short, he faces a whale of a big job.
In tackling that job, he has the good will of the administration at Washington and of the American people, who are year by year achieving a greater liking for their neighbors across the Rio Grande.
In his expressed plan to make Mexico a more vital link in the "hemisphere system" on which 21 American republics increasingly pin their faith, the people of the United States wish him success and prosperity.

Labor Seeks Hike in Unemployment Compensation Pay
WASHINGTON — Pressure of a snow-balling reserve fund is likely to force a change in the unemployment compensation sections of the social security act this winter.
Under the present law money is coming in just about twice as fast as it is going out. The unemployment insurance reserve fund today stands at about $1,700,000,000 and is figured to reach $2,250,000,000 by next July.
This reserve fund is invested by the secretary of the treasury in government bonds, each state's own contribution being held to its account.
Thus, instead of contributing to an increase in the national debt, this piling-up of the insurance fund provides a market for some of the bonds which the increase in the national debt puts on the market.
From labor and important New Dealers comes a demand that benefits payable be liberalized. From business interests comes a demand that the employers' burden be lightened—either by a lowering of the 3 per cent payroll tax, or by extension of the experience-rating system. Or perhaps both.
Whole future of the unemployment compensation system may depend largely on how this scrap comes out. The Social Security Board is inclined to liberalize benefits, both on the theory that in many states the sums now paid are inadequate and in the belief that anything which would increase mass buying power would be all to the good. Under the general heading of liberalizing benefits would come shortening of the waiting period, extension of the time over which benefits can be paid, and hiking of the amounts paid out.
In general, both the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. would back such a move. Interesting point is that the final rallying point of the liberalizers may be the McCormack bill (backed by Majority Leader John W. McCormack) which would write minimum benefit standards into the federal law. End result of such a step would probably be more or less complete federalization of the whole system—which, as it now stands, is actually a state affair operated under a degree of federal supervision.
Heal center of the argument, however, will be the business about experience ratings.
This is a system, now in effect in a number of states, whereby the unemployment insurance tax which an employer pays depends on his record in regard to stabilizing his own

Mexico Enters a New Phase
The complete calm and lack of disturbance with which Manuel Avila Camacho was inaugurated as Mexico's new president may prove to be a happy augury for his six-year term. The United States, whose chief interest lies in a Mexico steadily progressing under stable institutions, hopes it may be so.
The rude and unpleasant demonstration staged for Secretary Wallace on his arrival to attend the inauguration need not be taken too seriously. The sheer, fruitless bad taste of the affair pretty well identifies it with one of those political minorities whose sole influence lies in such demonstrations. There is no reason to doubt that Wallace's warm reception later by the Chamber of Deputies is much more representative of a growing cordiality toward the United States, which the Avila Camacho regime is pledged to foster.
The United States has been most patient and sympathetic toward Mexico in the past few years. That is partly due to a genuinely increasing good-will and understanding, and partly due, frankly, to the knowledge that Mexican good-will is more important to the United States today than it has been for a long time.
Our two countries need each other. Each will benefit by cultivating the other's good-will in the only effective way—by deserving it.
Avila Camacho takes the reins of Mexico at a difficult time. He succeeds a man, Lazaro Cardenas, who is generally conceded to have been a great president. Even those who disagree with his policies do not minimize his sheer stature. To be successor to such a man is always difficult.
Avila Camacho's own following is by no means united. He must restore the confidence of business, both foreign and domestic, while guarding the gains made by labor under Cardenas; again, not an easy task. He must revive an economy badly shattered by domestic convulsions and the shutting off of foreign trade. He must defend his country against foreign influences which have not hesitated to intrigue with his political opponents. He must settle the long-festering "oil controversy."
In short, he faces a whale of a big job.
In tackling that job, he has the good will of the administration at Washington and of the American people, who are year by year achieving a greater liking for their neighbors across the Rio Grande.
In his expressed plan to make Mexico a more vital link in the "hemisphere system" on which 21 American republics increasingly pin their faith, the people of the United States wish him success and prosperity.

Mrs. R. L. Branch Leads Program At Meeting of Cosmopolitan Club
Mrs. Branch, the president, called the December meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club to order at 3 o'clock on December 5 at the home of Mrs. Kenneth L. Spore with Mrs. Jo Black as co-hostess. Christmas decorations made the reception room festive with their many colors. Sixteen members and two visitors answered the roll call.

During the business session the members voted that the club get up a Christmas box for some needy family. Mrs. Branch introduced her program on Art by saying that art had been her favorite hobby since early childhood and that she had brought one to discuss this hobby who was an authority on the subject, a former teacher in Quenchita College and an artist. Mrs. George Haynes, Mrs. Haynes chose as her subject for discussion, "The Early English School of Art"—featuring three artists of that period: Thomas Gainsborough, George Romney and Sir Joshua Reynolds. Her lecture was both instructive and entertaining.

Mrs. Branch then distributed pallets and pencils to each member with the request that she draw the picture of the person on her right. The result was very amusing.

The hostesses served a delicious salad plate with Christmas favors.

B. Woodson, Baker has also played several minutes during the season, turning in outstanding broken field dashes and tossing several passes which have found their mark, one of them to Ellen for a winning touchdown.

The entire Bruin squad, for a winning touchdown.

The entire Bruin squad, for the first time this season, is in top condition to meet the California team which has been selected as the outstanding coast team of the year as a foe for the University of Hawaii in the famed Pineapple Bowl game in Honolulu, New Year's Day, and Coach Woodson is prepared to shoot the works.

Fresno, according to latest figures, is ranked on a par with Yale, and surpasses, among others, the teams of Army, New York University, and Boston University. Coming to Arkansas with only a defeat by Pop Warner's San Jose Spartans marked up against them, they have been decisive victors over Alonzo Stagg's College of the Pacific, the University of Nevada, Colorado and Texas Mines, as well as other outstanding name teams.

Appearing in the group of 26 which left the coast for the battle are Jack Mulkey, two time Little All-American, and Captain Earnest (Streaky) Poore, adjudged the outstanding back on the coast for 1940.

School officials have reported that a great deal of state-wide interest has been shown and the Little Rock Chamber of Commerce announced Friday that mail orders for tickets are pouring in rapidly. Advance prices on the game are $1.15 for general admission and $1.50 for reserved seats.

Chevrolet Has New Fixtures

Accessories Make Ideal Christmas Gift

There's sure to be one man in every family who presents a knotty problem at Christmas time, but if he's a motorist you can easily satisfy him. Chevrolet dealers are now showing a special display of new 1941 accessories that offer a score of solutions to the Christmas gift problem.

The average motorist, regardless of the age of his car, takes pride in its appearance, comfort, and safety features. Likewise, most motorists prefer to personalize their own cars with accessories tailored exclusively for them. This year, Chevrolet's range of accessory items designed specifically for the 1941 car and yet harmonizing with other models, is the broadest the national sales leader has ever offered.

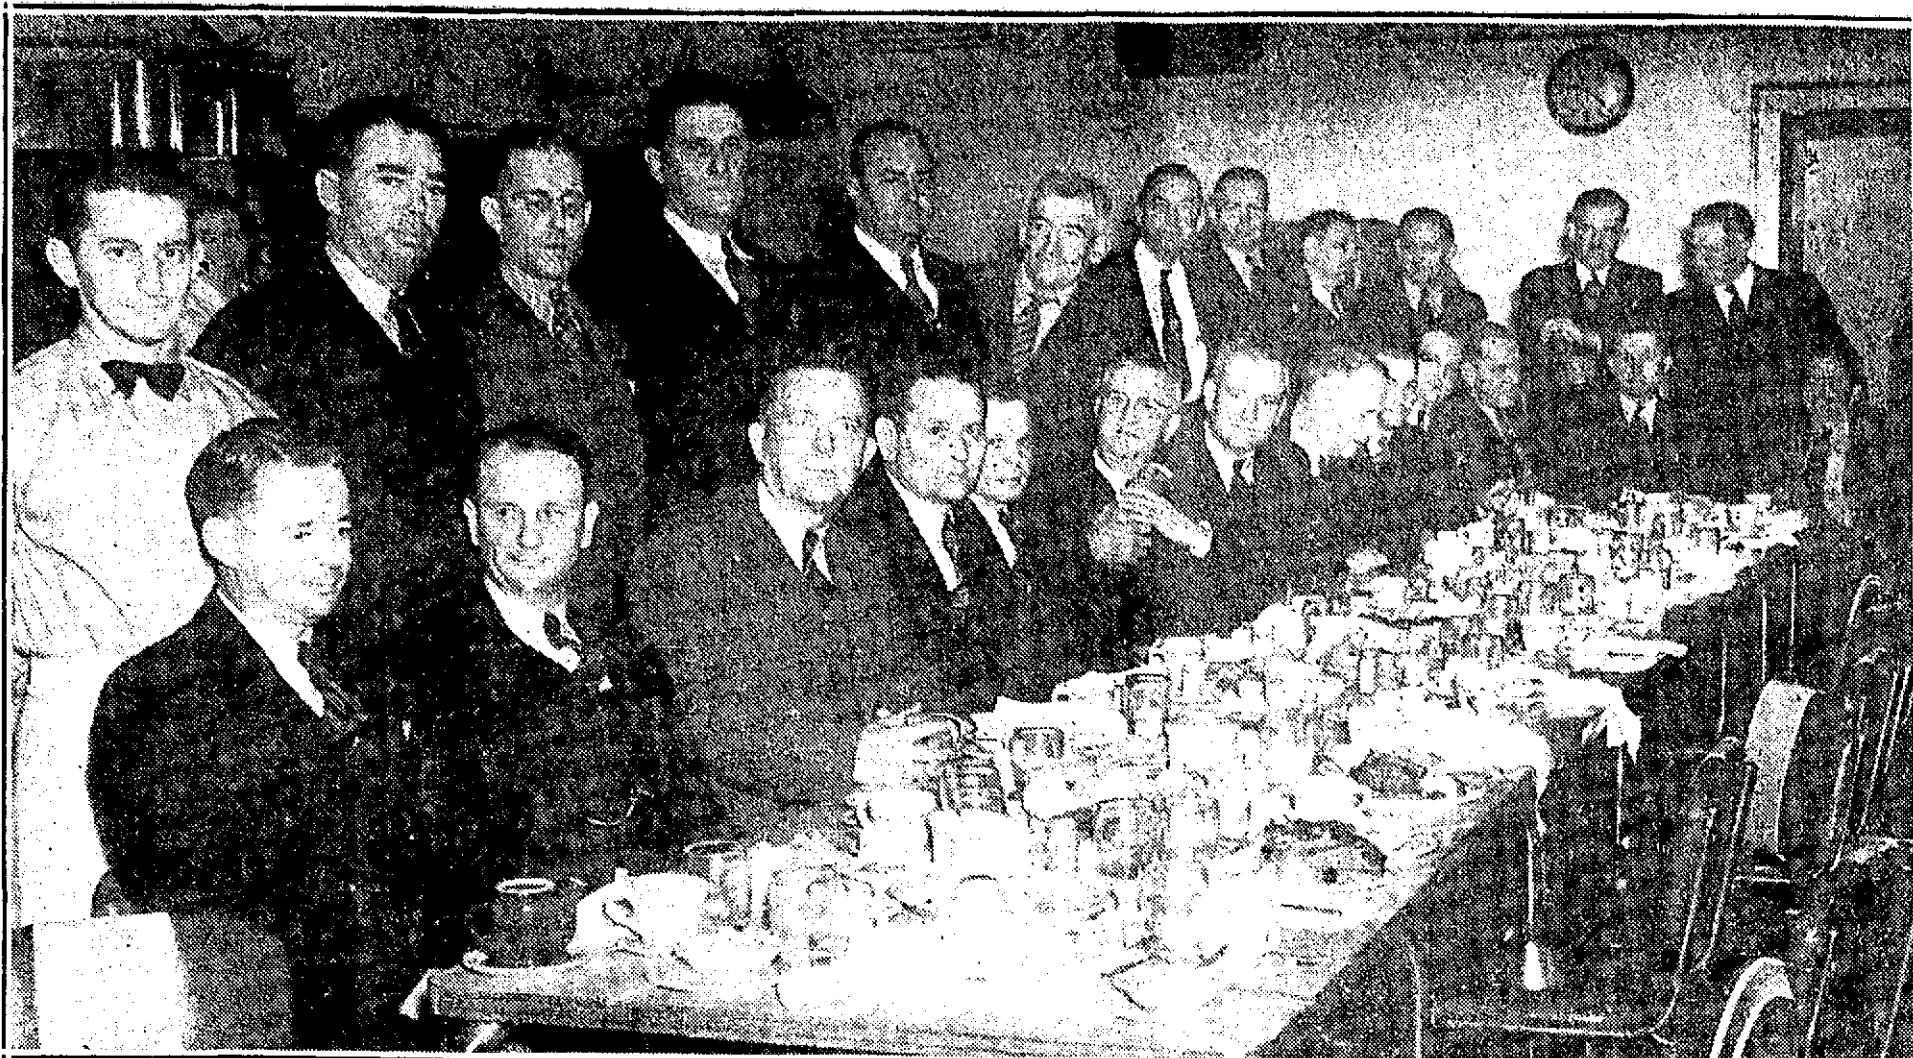

Listed under four groupings—safety, appearance, pleasure, and protection—the Chevrolet accessories, from grille guard to trunk guard, are modern to the minute, and are priced within the average budget for Christmas gift items.

Among the safety accessories a feature gift is the new direction signal, controlled by a convenient lever mounted on the left side of the steering column. The flashing of front fender and tail lights indicates direction of the turn. The direction signal is an appreciated contribution to driving safety and road courtesy.

Another safety item receiving favorable comment from motorists is the new glare-proof rear view mirror, built on an entirely new principle. Two surfaces of this mirror, controlled by pushing a tang, reduce glare at night without distorting vision, and afford full daytime reflection normally.

Motorists who are on the road much of the time will appreciate the convenience and safety features of Chevrolet's windshield washer, a vacuum-powered water supply operating in conjunction with the windshield wipers. The touch of a button re-

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Religious Profession Means Nothing Unless It Is Made a Reality in Life
Text: Luke 10:25-37

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

The parable of the Good Samaritan is old and familiar, but always new. It will continue to be both new and good news until it is put more widely into practice; for, despite the world's acquaintance with it, the world is still far from putting its spirit into practice. The policy of the good neighbor is need in every land and in every phase of human relations today.

Men approve the teaching when they read and study it in the parable, but they still fail to put it into practice. What will be the effect this year upon those who actually study this lesson, and upon those who read these words? Will we go out to put into practice what we have learned concerning the spirit and method of the Good Samaritan?

The story, of course, is well known, but some details of it need emphasis. It is a story of contrasts, and we may be sure that Jesus intended these contrasts to have their full effect. On the one hand, we have a priest and a Levite who saw the man who had been robbed and beaten and left half dead, but who did nothing to help him. On the other hand, we have a certain Samaritan who, when he saw the plight of the poor fellow, was "moved with compassion" and gave him every help.

Now, the point of the story is in this contrast between the conventional religious leaders in Israel and the Samaritan, whom they regarded as a religious outcast and a heretic. "The Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans."

Jesus did not mean to imply that all priests and Levites were hypocritical and unfeeling men, and that all

Samaritans were thoughtful and full of love toward their fellowmen—by no means. What He did intend to teach was that religious profession meant nothing unless it was a reality in life, and that even a man who might be thought of as an outcast religiously, might in deed and truth be a sincere exponent of the gospel of love and good will.

It is this fact that we need firmly and profoundly to grasp today in a time when there is such a tendency to judge men by their racial, religious, or sectional labels. Goodness is not confined to any one group, and their present units to form cadres for the new units to be formed. Training for this work is a large part of today's army activities.

Almost to a man the present army is a volunteer force—made up of men who volunteered before selective service became effective, or who volunteered for immediate service on being registered. The spirit seems excellent. The hardest kind of work for long hours and sometimes with inadequate equipment, brings no complaint. Officers seem to be buckling down with the same resolution, and to have every solicitude for the welfare of their men.

Serious Spirit

Training is practical and progressive. The many officers with ROTC and CCC experience are a definite asset, and the National Guard maneuverers, together with the better general staff of the guard, have put many units far ahead of the point that might be expected.

Recreation facilities are in an unfinished state in many camps, the movie tents and recreation halls being as yet not ready and under-equipped with books, magazines, and games. But that is plainly temporary.

There is little whoop-la, and no observable whipping up of hatred against any particular country. The whole spirit is businesslike and serious. Field problems are attacked by even the youngest recruits with deadly earnestness and clear determination to learn to be soldiers, and do it right. No high-flown sentiments, no incendiary songs. The whole army seems to have something of the spirit of a young aircraft mechanic who was sitting at a soda fountain in Columbus, Ga., when he was asked what prompted him to "join up."

"Well, they need an army, don't they?" he asked, gruffly, sincerely looking up from his soda. "Well, that's me."

Yerba Buena

Before it received its present name, San Francisco was called Yerba Buena, a Spanish name meaning "good herb." The name still clings to an island in the bay, connected to the mainland by the great Bay Bridge.
